PAPER-V A, PARTICIPATORY SOCIOLOGY-I
(For regular students)

Participatory Sociology is a course, which gives students an opportunity to explore the meaning of participation as a method for learning, to link theoretical knowledge on the one hand and classroom learning with every day life on the other.

The course is implemented in two stages. First stage is an introduction to the theoretical framework and at the second stage student is required to do participatory exercise; which include library work and fieldwork.

It enables them to relate their theoretical knowledge with empirical data and use participatory technique to undertake sociological Research.

Note: Students would be informed about the various participatory exercises they have to do, during the course of the academic session.

PAPER-XI; PARTICIPATORY SOCIOLOGY-II
(For regular students)

Participatory Sociology is a course, which gives students an opportunity to explore the meaning of participation as a method for learning, to link theoretical knowledge on the one hand and classroom learning with every day life on the other.

The course is implemented in two stages. First stage is an introduction to the theoretical framework and at the second stage student is required to do participatory exercises, which includes library work and fieldwork. It enables them to relate their theoretical knowledge with empirical data and use participatory technique to undertake sociological research.

Note: Students would be informed about the various participatory exercises they have to do, during the course of the academic session.
